Message from the President

Dear ABS colleagues:

Welcome to Denver! Please take time during the next few days to express thanks to Victor Konrad for the exciting academic program he and his committee assembled for us. We are honoring Oscar Martinez as the association’s first lifetime achievement award winner. I hope you will all be present for his stimulating talk, and our celebration of his many contributions to the association.

We also thank and honor Emmanuel Brunet-Jailly for his tireless service to the association over two terms as executive secretary. The board will select and announce the new secretariat home during the conference.

Each time we gather to share ideas, theories and renew friendships we always have a number of students in attendance as well. Please extend a warm welcome to them and consider attending the student panel.

Thank you to the officers and board members of the association for your service to the organization. The collegial and intellectual strength of the Association for Borderlands Studies continues to be borne out in the willingness of members to devote time and energy to our future as an association. As I pass the presidency to Victor Konrad, I know I leave ABS in capable hands. His work with the ABS Visioning Committee, formed under past-president Heather Nicol, gives him a strong perspective for the association’s leadership.

Best wishes,
Christine Thurlow Brenner
ABS President 2012-13
ABS 2013 is just around the corner. Soon we will gather in Denver with the WSSA to share our research, engage in discussion and debate, listen to reports from an ever widening circle of participants from around the world, and generally participate in the founding and sustaining forum for border studies. In 2013, the ABS program features panels and presentations on a wide variety of themes addressing important and timely issues in border studies situated in borderlands around the globe. Border studies is matur ing as a field of intellectual inquiry and public policy application, and our 2013 program in Denver reflects this coming of age.

Before you come to Denver, I encourage you to study the program and consider carefully how you may gain most from the variety of panels and presentations offered. I believe that the program offers something for everyone engaged in border studies. Every effort has been made to make this variety accessible to all participants and also to enable participants to follow specific “tracks” devoted to consistent themes such as borders and environment, terrorism and violence in borderlands, border culture, and identity politics in borderlands. Theme panels are often consecutive in the schedule, and every effort has been made to reduce time conflicts among panels that would appeal to a certain group of border specialists. Many of us do, however, pursue several specialties in border studies, and we may not be able to attend all of the panels that we would like to. (There are 35 panels with more than 100 presenters). This is inevitable as the ABS grows in both numbers and diversity of participants, and this is a positive sign of growth. A one page ABS Panel and Event Planner will enable you to see all of the panels and events at a glance, and navigate your way through the selections.

ABS 2013 features plenary sessions and special events every day of the conference. A flyer listing these in detail will be provided at registration. In summary, on Thursday, April 11, Panel 6 is a brown bag lunch and a movie featuring the award winning documentary Paraiso for Sale, and Panel 7 features our first ABS Lifetime Achievement Award recipient, Oscar Martinez, addressing the “Ultimate Border Question: Why is my side poorer than yours?” On Friday, Panel 21 is a plenary on “Public Policy and the Border: The ‘Beyond the Border Accord’ between Canada and the United States in the Context of Globalization and Transnationalism”. This is followed at the end of the day by our annual ABS business meeting, and the ABS reception featuring our ABS awards and the book award speaker. Then, on Saturday, there is a morning short course on Visualizing North America’s Changing Environment sponsored by the Commission on Environmental Cooperation, Panel 29, a plenary on Indigenous Aínina People and Borders, and Panel 30, a plenary discussion “Making A World-Wide Border Studies Community.” Don’t miss any of these ABS plenary sessions and special events.

Conference programs require a great deal of vision, commitment and plain old hard work to fashion the paper proposals of a large number of scholars, as well as special events and activities, into a three day gathering. This year we acknowledged that program building and coordination can no longer be done alone, and we initiated the 2013 ABS Program Advisory Committee: Anne-Laure Amilhat Szary, Don Alper, Chris Brown, Heather Nicol, Tony Payan and Martin van der Velde. This approach worked well and enabled us to develop a program of considerable depth and diversity. I wish to thank them for their help and guidance. I benefitted as well from the advice of ABS President Christine Brenner, and the substantial support of the secretariat: Emmanuel Brunet-Jalilly and Jennifer Guest. The task was made manageable and enjoyable because of the enthusiasm, cooperation, attention to timeliness, and commitment of all of the participants on the program.

I look forward to seeing you all soon in Denver.

The organizers wish to thank ABORNE – The African Borderlands Research Network and the Finnish Association for Russian and East European Studies for their financial and scientific contribution.
Call for Papers - “Border Code”

Conference dates: November 6–8, 2013.
Location: University of Eastern Finland, Joensuu

Verbal and visual representations of borders are surprisingly similar around the world. The research project Writing Cultures and Traditions at Borders (WCTB) has been studying historically, culturally, and politically layered characteristics and meanings of borders in amateur and professional writing practices and texts in the national Finland–Russia and Estonia–Russia borderlands.

Political, cultural, and individual interests are always present when talking about borders. These interests influence how the borders are seen and what kinds of meanings are given to them. Representations of borders are fairly durable and standardized in certain political eras and situations. The WCTB-project concluding seminar theme centers on whether there even exists a so-called ‘border code’ that directs the research on borders.

WCTB welcomes papers that investigate any aspects of conceptualization and representation of borders and borderlands. Possible themes could include, but are not limited to:

• What kinds of durable and standardized concepts direct each discipline?
• What factors, such as scholarly traditions, culture, politics, and ideology, influence border research?
• Could the ‘border concept’ be deconstructed from the viewpoints of different disciplines or is it fossilized?

Please send proposals (max 200 words) to Tuulikki Kurki (tuulikki.kurki@uef.fi) by 6 May, 2013. A biographical statement of no more than 250 words should be included (additional to the abstract word count). Those who submit a proposal will be advised by 31 May, 2013.

Further information available from the organizing committee: Saija Kaskinen, Tuulikki Kurki, Kirsi Laurén, Mari Ristolainen and Tuija Saarinen (firstname.lastname@uef.fi). We are looking forward to your proposals.

Invited keynote speakers of the conference are Professor Sarah Green and Professor David Newman.

Sarah Green is Professor of Social and Cultural Anthropology at the University of Helsinki. She has focused her research on issues relating to border dynamics and to questions of space, place and location more widely since the early 1990s. She is the Chair of EastBordNet, a 27-country research network studying border regions across the eastern peripheries of Europe. She has published widely on borders issues, with the most recent book, Borderwork (2013).

David Newman is Dean of the faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences, and professor of political geography in the Department of Politics and Government at Ben Gurion University in Israel. Since 1999, he has been the chief editor of the international journal, Geopolitics. He has published widely on the role and significance of borders in the contemporary era.
REPORT: The final conference of the Border Aesthetics research project
University of Tromsø, Tromsø. 5-8 September 2012

The final conference of the Border Aesthetics research project (2010-2013) was held at the University of Tromsø on 5-8 September 2012. This interdisciplinary and international conference had as its aim to investigate how changing perceptions of borders relate to shifting aesthetic practices.

The conference built on ongoing work at the University of Tromsø (the Border Poetics/Culture research group) and within the Border Aesthetics research project, including its external participants at universities and university colleges in Düsseldorf, Nijmegen, Umeå, Joensuu, Volda, Bergen and Bergamo. The project also cooperated with the Pikene på broen cultural production collective in the border town of Kirkenes and the Tromsø Gallery of Contemporary Art Tromsø kunstforening in arranging events at the conference.

Financing was provided through the project by the KULVER (Assigning Cultural Values) research programme of the Research Council of Norway and the University of Tromsø, with additional funding from the University of Tromsø and the Department of Culture and Literature at the University of Tromsø. Through careful planning, the conference reached all of its main goals while keeping within the budget.

The conference was covered by live tweeting using the #bordaesth tag.

International and transdisciplinary participants
The conference attracted 53 registered participants, including literary scholars, political geographers, historians, anthropologists, folklorists, linguists, media scholars, urban planners, architects, and students. Regional authors, performing artists, filmmakers, and artistic producers took part in a special panel. Students taking part in a course on border poetics came to lectures and non-registered academics made up larger audiences at the keynote lectures.

Several researchers from EU FP7 research project EUBORDERSCAPES took part, as well as a group of researchers from the Finnish Academy research project Writing Cultures and Borders (WCTB) at the Karelian Institute, University of Eastern Finland. The Barents Institute in Kirkenes was represented by three researchers. The Border Conditions group at Delft University of Technology organized the panel Reading and Reacting: From the Research of Border Conditions to Architectural and Urban Design. Participants in the Border Aesthetics project gave papers, including four collaborative papers.
Of the registered participants, 34 came from Norway, five from the Netherlands, four from Finland, and the others from Italy, Spain, Israel, Denmark, England, Sweden, Germany, Russia, Switzerland and the United States.

Scientific content

The programme included 29 papers in two parallel sessions. The programming was carefully designed to encourage participants to attend papers concerning a wide variety of regions.

Topics addressed the negotiation of borders: in photography, political satire, feature films, artistic happenings, literary fiction, poetry, theatre performances, local communities, urban spaces, architecture, magazines, and life stories. Papers also addressed questions about the aesthetic dimensions of: the visibility/invisibility of borders, culture borders and diaspora, waiting at borders, the borders of the subject, ecological borders, the economic crisis and sovereignty.

Some titles included:

- Zooming in – Zooming out: Politics of Photographic Aesthetics across Finnish-Russian Borders in the 1930s
- InVisible/InVisual Subjects: Notes Toward the Aesthetics and Politics of (Medial) Borderscapes
- Aesthetics/Politics/Ethics: North Korea in Kirkenes
- The Samovar Theatre on the Russian-Norwegian Border
- Literary Tools for Site-Specific Analysis of Borders and Marginal Urban Areas
- Sami Feature Films and Norwegian Film Politics at the Border
- Diaspora Aesthetics: Blackness, Fluidity, Representation
- Borderlines and Contraband: Bakhtin and the Question of the Subject
- The Waiting State: Kafka and Coetzee’s Imaginary Geographies of the B/ordering of the State
- Ecologies of Borders / Borders of Ecologies
- Woolfian Border-Poetics and Contemporary Circadian Novels
- Alex Rivera’s Sleep Dealer and ‘Americanity’ on the Border

The conference was opened by the head of the Department of Culture and Literature, Cathrine Theodorsen, and featured three keynote lectures by Ulrike H. Meinhof, of the University of Southampton; Fredrik Tygstrup of the University of Copenhagen; and Debra A. Castillo of Cornell University.

Cultural Programme
Four actors in the Barents Region aesthetic borderscape — Knut Erik Jensen (filmmaker), Liv Lundberg (poet and professor of Creative Writing, Tromsø), Liv-Hanne Haugen (dance artist) and Luba Kuzovnikova (artistic director, Pikene på broen, Kirkenes) — presented their work and shared with us their thoughts on cultural production in Northern borderlands in an inspiring panel.

Dmitry Vilensky of art collective Chto delat/?What is to be done?, based in Petersburg, presented the group and their ongoing work on in a Songspiel based on the Russian-Norwegian borderlands. The presentation, open to the public, was held at the Tromsø Gallery of Contemporary Art (Tromsø kunstforening). Their Museum Songpiel: The Netherlands 20XX was shown as an example of previous work, and a lively debate followed involving conference participants and members of the public.

Internal Border Aesthetics project workshop
On September 8, after the final day of the open conference, a workshop was held on Sommarøy outside Tromsø, involving 12 members of the Border Aesthetics research project, with the aim of developing work on a planned book on Border Aesthetics (see below). In a genuinely inspiring atmosphere, four pre-distributed chapter drafts and two proposals were discussed at length, and plans for further work on the book were finalized.

Publications
A special issue of conference papers is planned for the Norwegian level 1 periodical Nordlit. Fourteen manuscripts, including two of the keynote lectures, are being refereed, and publication is planned for Fall 2013.

The conference and internal workshop were instrumental in developing work on a book on Border Aesthetics. This book will include some of the chapter drafts presented as papers at the conference.

Collaboration with the Chto delat/?What is to be done? art collective is continuing after meetings with Dmitry Vilensky during and after the conference. A new issue in their series of newspapers will be published in connection with the premiere of their Border Songspiel art video at the Barents Spektakel in February 2013. This is a collaboration with the Border Aesthetics research project, and among the projected articles in the newspaper are four articles by six members of the project, aimed at a public interested in critical perspectives on art and borders.

She discusses the relationships that have formed among passionate citizen groups, the messages they promote, and public understanding at the national level of the issues at stake in the immigration debate.
